

Here's One Way to Prevent Illness on the Job

A more effective way is to have an Illness and Injury Prevention Plan (IIPP). According to Cal/OSHA, lack of such a plan is one of the top violations! All employers are required to have a written, effective illness and injury prevention program that addresses hazards particular to their particular workplace.

If you need a plan or would like to update your current plan, the El Camino College Business Training Center can help. We're hosting a FREE hands-on IIPP workshop for businesses in the manufacturing industry.

The session covers IIPP requirements and provides you the opportunity to draft a plan for your own company. Information on how your company can qualify for additional on-site training at no-cost will also be presented.

The workshop will be conducted by Don Dressler, an attorney and risk management consultant with over 30 years experience working with employers in California.

A full breakfast and all materials are included. Due to limited space, advanced registration is required. Please call the El Camino College Business Training Center at 310.973.3176 to register. Seating is limited to the first 50 registrants.

Utilize No-Cost Training for Your Staff

To offset the high cost of finding and keeping qualified employees, many businesses have turned to the El Camino College Business Training Center (BTC) for assistance in upgrading staff skills.

The BTC provides customized on-site training solutions to qualified employers at NO CHARGE. We are able to make this offer because we have funding from the Employment Training Panel. The Employment Training Panel is a California state agency created in 1983 as a cooperative business-labor program. It's the only training program in California that targets retraining of currently employed workers.

Since 1999, the BTC has successfully trained more than 3,700 employees of companies in various industries throughout the state. Our instructors are hired based on industry experience, product knowledge, training skills and a demonstrated ability to deliver quality instruction.

For more information on how your company can qualify, please attend the IIPP workshop, or call the BTC at 310.973.3176.
